

CONSTITUTION OF

THE INTERNATIONAL SOCIETY FOR BIOSEMIOTIC STUDIES

NAME

- 1.1 This Society shall be known as the “International Society for Biosemiotic Studies”, hereinafter referred to as the “Society”.
- 1.2 This Constitution is available at: www.biosemiotics.org.

PLACE OF BUSINESS

- 2.1 Its place of business shall be at Křížkovského 14, 77900 Olomouc, Czech Republic, or such other address as may subsequently be decided upon by the Executive Committee, in consultation with the Society Board.

OBJECTIVES

- 3.1 Biosemiotics is a science studying meaning making in living systems. It is an interdisciplinary research agenda investigating the myriad forms of communication and signification found in and between organisms. It is thus the study of representation, meaning, sense, and the biological significance of codes and sign processes, from intracellular to intercellular codes and signaling processes to animal display behavior, communication, and semiotic artifacts such as language and abstract symbolic thought.

The purpose of the International Society for Biosemiotic Studies (ISBS) is to constitute an organizational framework for the collaboration among scholars dedicated to biosemiotic studies, and to propagate knowledge of this field of study to researchers in related areas, as well as to the public in general. Towards this end, the Society will assure the organization of regular meetings on research into the semiotics of living nature, as well as to promote the publication of scholarly work on the semiotics of life processes.

Most fundamentally, the Society considers that one of its most important purposes is the promotion of a cross-disciplinary exchange of ideas between researchers who are actively studying any of the myriad forms of semiosis in the biological world. ISBS thus welcomes the membership and collaboration of scholars from all relevant disciplines, including biology, philosophy, ethology, cognitive science, anthropology, and semiotics.

- 3.2 In furtherance of the above objects, the Society may maintain a website for the cross-disciplinary exchange of research findings and theoretical approaches to biosemiotics at www.biosemiotics.org, hold an annual academic conference for the presentation of research papers, which both members and non-member scholars may attend, contract with a publisher to publish a book series and a regularly published journal of biosemiotic scholarship, and to finance its operations through the collection of an agreed-upon percentage from the university or institution hosting the annual conference (generally 60% of conference registration fees collected to be paid to the Society after all of the host institution’s expenses for putting on the conference have been subtracted, although the exact percentage each year will be decided by the Board in discussion with the host after considering exchange rates and the financial situation of the hosting institution.)

MEMBERSHIP QUALIFICATION AND RIGHTS
